WEEK OF JULY 25

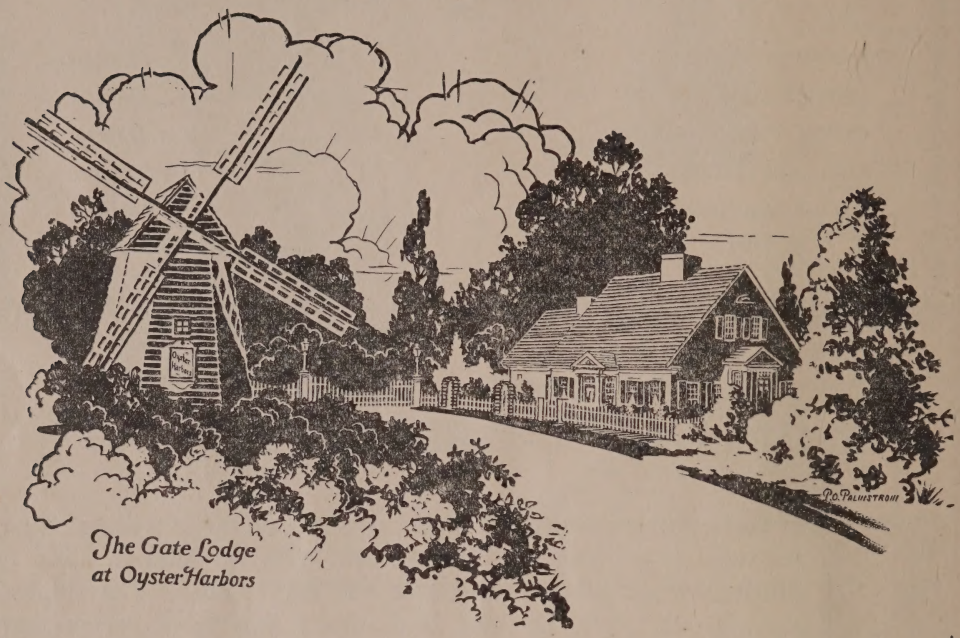
GUARANTORS FOR THE CAPE PLAYHOUSE

THE Cape Playhouse believes firmly that the public is willing to pay for what is good in the Theatre, and with this idea in mind no solicitation of gifts or donations has been made. The theatre's expenses are heavy, however, and since a number of persons have asked what they might do to further the work of the Playhouse, and how they might help to establish eventually an art center of note at Dennis, the Cape Playhouse suggests that these persons become guarantors of the Theatre to the extent of agreeing to purchase two hundred and fifty dollars worth of tickets during the present season. It is requested that the sum be placed at the disposal of the theatre at once, and that tickets be ordered at the box-office, to the extent of this sum, as they are needed. In this way the Cape Playhouse feels assured of the interest and support of its patrons, and is not placed in the position of being subsidized entirely through the generosity or goodwill of the public. It permits the Cape Playhouse to return value for value, and at the same time gives the management some idea of what financial obligations it might still undertake this season in securing for the Cape fine actors, fine plays, and fine productions; what it might do toward establishing a Junior company for the development of talent among the young people of the Cape, and what it might do toward establishing a small gallery for the exhibition of paintings, etchings, sculpture and other work of the artists of the Cape.

If you are interested in becoming a Guarantor of the Cape Playhouse activities, kindly see Mr. Moore.

OYSTER HARBORS

OSTERVILLE, MASS.



The Gate Lodge at Oyster Harbors

A SELECTED COLONY OF SUBSTANTIAL AMERICAN HOMES

When you have built at Oyster Harbors—right at your door is a 6539 yard golf course, designed and constructed by Donald Ross and considered by experts to be one of America's finest.

If you are a yachtsman, all Nantucket Sound and beyond, Cotuit Bay, West Bay and North Bay await you. Along eight miles of shore front, nine harbors, some newly dredged, afford shelter places for your craft immediately in front of your residence.

And there is bathing, tennis, riding and fishing, for other leisure hours.

Six miles of private woodland roads are now permanently surfaced.

Your neighbors will be such folks as you would personally select. Their homes, like yours, will be set in large plots among the pine-clad slopes of this 700-acre vacation Colony.

SYNOPSIS

The action of the play is contemporary and takes place in New York.

ACT I

The Living Room in the house of Bronson Lenox in East Sixty-fifth Street.

ACT II

Scene 1: A private dining room in a restaurant in the theatre district.
Scene 2: Private dining room No. 7.
Scene 3: Back to room in Scene 1.

ACT III

Same as Act 1. The next morning.

Supervised by Florence Johns.

Note—Miss Johns was present and personally supervised the rehearsals. A very difficult contract prevented her from appearing in the play. Miss Johns will be seen in another play later in the season.

THE JUNIOR PLAYHOUSE

An organization devoted to the development of talent among the young people of the Cape

AN ART GALLERY

IT is the desire of the Cape Playhouse to give to Cape Cod an organization that will meet the needs of creative artists in every field, and with this idea in mind the Cape Playhouse plans and hopes to establish eventually something which is considerably more than a Theatre. It hopes to give the Cape an institution that will foster every type of artistic endeavor, a place wherein artist-workers may gather and bring their talents to the fullest possible fruition—in an atmosphere not suited to dilletantes.

One means towards this end would be the building of a small gallery for the exhibition of paintings, sculpture, etchings and wood blocks. The gallery could be devoted to one-man shows, the exhibitions to last one week each, so that a number might be accomodated through the summer season of the theatre; and these exhibitions would bring the work of the artists of the Cape into prominence locally, and more widely quite possibly; and the Cape Playhouse would have the opportunity of displaying them before a public which probably would be capable of buying if they liked.

In Provincetown and in other towns on the Cape are many fine artists, or persons whose talents would warrant encouragement and fostering, and the Cape Playhouse, since it is centrally located, would be in a good position to display their work. Many of them have not reached the public to the extent that their work deserves, and some are not in a position to underwrite even the expenses of an exhibition of their own works. In some cases the Cape Playhouse would be willing to undertake this; and in other cases it would like to be the medium of presenting the works of these promising artists to the public. Underlying the aim would be the belief that good work in the art world is capable of supporting itself without being subsidized by a tolerant public.

It is doubtful that such a gallery can be built this season, but if so, a number of fine exhibits are ready, the first of which would be an exquisite group of Arctic landscapes in water-colors—Arctic villages, icebergs and sea, and inland scenes done by an artists who sailed last summer as cook with the MacMillan expedition to the North Pole.

THE CAPE PLAYHOUSE PROGRAM

It is not the intention or purpose of The Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Cape Cod, Massachusetts, to make a general canvass for advertising.

The Cape Playhouse program has nothing in common with the ordinary cosmopolitan theatre program. Neither are advertisements displayed on the curtain, by films or in any portion of the house.

The theatre's locale, its atmosphere, the high standing of its casts, devotion to the written drama, and the character of its patrons, will insure the program being retained for perusal and reference. While practicing no discrimination, we have and will have only selected advertisers in keeping with the appreciation and approbation of our patrons. Its composition and circulation will be in keeping with desirable ethics of publicity and free from annoyances from various sources.

A scrutiny of the list of advertisers will show shops, inns, hotels, tea-rooms and other business houses of a high grade who recognize the desirable character of our patrons and subscribers.

They have and are co-operating with our patrons and us in establishing this desirable feature on the Cape.

We earnestly trust that our patrons will favor them with their patronage.

Any information as to advertising should be addressed to
